

WOMEN PLAYERS PUT UP GOOD GAME

Chicago Stars Beaten by Fulton
Brownies Yesterday.

ONLY ONE RUN WAS TALLIED

This Was in the Ninth Inning—The Girls
Can Run, Throw and Slide Bases.
Score Was One to Nothing.

Mr. Spalding Here.

Girls may walk,
and
Girls may talk,
and
Girls may play croquet,
But,
They can't strike a match
On the seat of their pants.

They can't hit that way.
Well, the Chicago Stars, female baseball players, are certainly erected differently from most girls. They may fall short in the match striking business, but for good baseball they take the top notch. In direct opposition to every maxim, grown old and young, about a girl's power to throw where she looked, the Stars held the Fulton Brownies down to a few singles yesterday at Broad Street Park, the score being 1 to 0 against them at the close of the ninth inning.

The game was witnessed by thirty-five hundred spectators, as the gate receipts show, and was full of ginger and snappy work until the ending. Not until the ninth inning did either side tally, and then on an error of the shortstop of the Stars, Darby crossed over the plate, making the only run of the game. The ninth inning opened with Miss Maggie Burke, for the Stars, at the bat. Miss Burke, being very short and stumpy, waited for a ball in the right place, and had three strikes called on her. W. Gage (male), the shortstop, followed her and got his base on an error of Eacho at second. Russell (also male) followed Gage with a two base hit, anchoring Gage on third. Here he died, the other two players going in short order.

WINNING RUN.

The Brownies went in to win in their last half, and Darby was the first man up. Hooker, who had been placed in the box to relieve Miss Nelson, allowed him to get a two base hit. Eacho followed Darby with a pop foul to the catcher. Jim McEvoy placed a hot one to the shortstop, who fumbled a short time and then threw to first. McEvoy was out, but Darby had crossed the plate. This was a plenty and the game ended. Score, 1 to 0, favor Brownies.

Not until after the appointed time for the game did the umpire call out for the players to take their places. The grand stand was crowded, while the bleachers were packed to overflowing, the crowd breaking through the lines and into the ground. The Stars went to bat and lined up as follows:

GOOD BATTER.

Miss St. Claire demonstrated her ability to swing the leather good and hard when she first went to bat. Three fouls were placed in left garden and then a swift one from McEvoy was met squarely to left. Morgan made a low run and pulled it down when it was near the fence. Miss Robertson went out on a liner to second, to first. Miss Burke got four balls, and a minute later stole second on a beautiful slide. Eacho standing back to witness the exhibition. Gage went out to first base and the side was retired. The Brownies went out on a faced Miss Nelson. There was a symmetrical twist of the well formed body, and a drop was thrown. Sharp got the second one however, and away she went to left field. Miss Burke was out there however, and with a run gracefully made, she pulled it down. Morgan, the heavy hitter for the Fulton boys, thought he had a clinch, and when the umpire called him out after three balls had passed over the plate, he had an other thought.

Darby singled, but Eacho failed to make good, and the side retired. It was this way through the game. In the opening of the ninth the Stars and a runner on third, but could get him no further.

GOOD GAME.

Dressed in red bloomers, the aggregation from Chicago created no little comment in the grand stand. They were nevertheless cheered to the echo by the enthusiastic crowd who had planned down their money to see the game. It was as good a game as had been played in the Tri-City League this season. But for the excellent team work of the Brownies they would have been defeated ignominiously. As it was they won by a score of 1 to 0 and have nothing to brag over. In the ninth inning, Miss Nelson had to be replaced in the box by Hooker, a player from the Manchester team. Hooker repeatedly made the Fulton boys strike at air, yet Darby, who had before made three errors, won the game by his two-base hit in the opening of the ninth.

TELL US BED HOUSE SET AFIRE

William Watkins Charged With Murder of Watkins Newman at Jefferson City.

(By Associated Press.)
KNOXVILLE, TENN., August 20.—The coroner's jury investigating the alleged robbery and murder of Watkins Newman, and the partial cremation of his body in his home near Jefferson City, reported to-night, recommending the arrest of William Watkins.

The accused was a witness before the jury, and was at once taken into custody and jailed at Morristown, Tenn. The testimony tended to show that Newman had been murdered, tied to his bed and the house set on fire. His arms and legs were burned off, and an examination showed that robbery had also been committed.

C. T. Rankin, a lawyer, testified that Watkins had been ejected from one of Newman's houses, and went to Rankin to consult him concerning a suit for damages. He asked the attorney what would be the effect on the suit if Newman was out of the way and could not testify. He made the assertion three times in his attorney's presence that he would get even with Newman. Other arrests are expected.

the name of the negro and the number of his wagon and reported it at the station. Later in the day the case reached Captain Tomlinson, who, in company with Sergeants Gibson and Barfoot and Policemen Krouse, went to No. 4 East Broad Street and made a haul.

They found in the garret of the house two faro tables and a crap table, which they sent to the Third station. No one in the house knew anything about the paraphernalia.

The stuff in both cases will probably be held until the cases are disposed of, when it will be destroyed.

Early this morning Mr. Wyatt received information that a lot of paraphernalia was stored in a house on Broad Street between Sixth and Seventh, and in company with Policemen Toler he went to the place. The two men tried the door, but found it locked. A woman living on the third floor refused to open the door "until six o'clock this morning." She stated that the occupants of the second floor rooms had fled to West Point, and would not be back until to-day. If the men do not get in sooner, they will keep watch until six o'clock.

In the meantime, Policemen Schiller is watching a safe belonging to the owner of the gambling outfit secured at No. 522 Broad Street. An effort will be made to-day to get into the safe.

at night, when the firing would be entirely for signalling purposes and to announce the discovery of Pillsbury's squadron.

Admiral Higginson lost no time in getting under way after the hour agreed upon for the beginning of the contest had arrived. During the forenoon the ships were getting up steam, and at about 12 o'clock they began to weigh anchor, and half an hour later all except the flagship Kearsarge had started out. First the Kearsarge and four of the torpedo boats headed out the breakwater, bearing toward the north. A second torpedo boat followed toward the northeast.

LARGER SHIPS MOVE.

The Brooklyn and the Olympia moved out together, with the Alabama astern of the latter and the Massachusetts at the end of the line. These ships seemed to make directly east. Just before noon a torpedo boat came in from the south, and after joining another vessel of the same class, sailed out together, accompanied by the Scorpion.

The Thornton and Gloucester went out beyond the southern passage just before 2 o'clock. At about the same moment the Montgomery, accompanied by the Leiden, moved out to the westward. This left the Kearsarge and one torpedo boat inside the breakwater.

All the ships, after going two miles off shore, dropped their speed and lay to, apparently waiting for the Kearsarge to join them. The big vessels of the squadron, when the morning sun broke upon them to-day, were as motionless and gave as little sign of life as the rocks on the nearby shore. The little torpedo boats were not far from the larger craft. As stated before, the Kearsarge was the only vessel in the squadron that was not being towed.

Signals were exchanged and small craft were dodging about. The torpedo boats began to throw out black smoke, and then the larger vessels showed their fires being directed against the gunboats. Spectators increased, and from every advantageous point the proceedings were eagerly watched.

THE TWO SQUADRONS.

Commander Pillsbury's squadron included the auxiliary cruisers Preraphael, Thetis and Supply. Rear-Admiral Higginson has his flagship, the Kearsarge, and two other battleships, the Massachusetts and the Alabama, and the cruisers Brooklyn, Olympia and Montgomery, besides seven torpedo boats, two unarmored gunboats, two tugs and the converted yacht Mayflower and Gloucester.

The torpedo boats are the Shubrick, Decatur (destroyer), Thornton, Stockton, Taylor, and Bidler. The gunboats are the Scorpion and the Peoria. While the vessels of the "White Squadron" are understood to represent an attacking force of great power, in reality it can hardly be compared with the defending command.
